For the Love of Eyes

More than 14 million Americans over the age of 45 report difficulty recognizing someone across a room, paying bills, reading newsprint, or functioning outside the house due to vision loss. According to a survey conducted by Enight Skills Center, Inc., that number is expected to increase to more than 19 million by 2030. Glaucoma, Age Related Macular Degeneration, Cataracts and Diabetic Retinopathy are just some of the common eye diseases that interfere with our daily independence; even with the best corrective eyeglasses or contact lens.

As our eyes change we need to look for simple solutions to maintain independence throughout our daily life. The first step is to talk with your eye care professional about any fluctuations in your vision, and of course discuss changes with your health or medications you are taking. Your eye care professional will ensure your eye wear prescription is current, and then consider visiting Access Technologies, Inc. to explore different magnification and contrast eyewear options that will complement the recommendations made by your doctor.

At Home and Work

In today’s digital world we use computers throughout our workday, and when we get home many of us watch a movie on our tablet devices. We check the news on our smartphone, read our favorite book electronically, and when we need directions or a telephone number, yet again, we turn to a digital screen; and then we wonder why we experience eye-fatigue or eye-strain.

Many individuals who experience these tired eye symptoms have found Blue Light Blocking eyewear, such as the Polinelli Reading Glasses, help reduce or prevent these symptoms. The Polinelli lens are designed to block approximately 30% of potentially harmful blue light and also feature UV400 protection which eliminates glare from enhanced visual clarity. The Polinelli Reading Glasses are available in a variety of fun colors and strengths from 0 to 5.

If you need a little more light while reading a newsletter, memo or budget report, you might wish to explore the line of Light Specs by Foster Grant. These eyeglasses project the light directly in the area your eyes need it. They even provide a little light to assist with repairs around the home, when soldering small computer components, or assembling model airplanes.

If your electronic tasks have you working on tiny computer print, low vision software will allow you to adjust the size and style of the text and icons, change the color contrast, or have your text read aloud to make your computer “vision friendly” – again.

At School and Play

Handheld magnifiers are great for quick viewing tasks, while electronic and stand magnifiers are designed for extended viewing tasks, such as studying, reading reference books, and class notes.

Different eye disease affect the way light is perceived. More or brighter light is not always better. Instead, many individuals experience reduced eye fatigue while using contrast enhancing filters, such as the Havens or SolarShield Absorptive Filter in tint that pleases their eyes while reading either print or electronic material.

If your hobby includes needlework, quilting, sewing or fly tying, try the 2x magnification of the clip-on MaxDetail it just may allow you to more easily thread the needle, view your stitches or tie the perfect fly.

Ask REMI!

Dear Remi,

With the days getting shorter, I find myself driving rural roads before daylight and I struggle with glare from the oncoming headlights. Do you have a better solution than wearing my sunglasses? ~ Rose

Thank you for your question Rose. Regular sunglasses might not be the best solution. Instead you may wish to consider a good pair of Night Drivers; specifically designed to effectively enhance contrast, while also allowing drivers to distinguish between green, red and yellow traffic lights.

The picture below shows a simulation of the difference in the glare a driver may see both before and after wearing Haven Night Drivers.

The Specialists at Access Technologies, Inc. (ATI), provide FREE educational demonstrations of over 2,000 assistive technologies, including magnifiers and eyewear. Call our office at 503-361-1201 and schedule time to have a Specialist walk you through a hands-on (eye-on) demonstration of easy to use low vision solutions.

Many of the products you explore during the demonstration are also available through ATI's Device Lending Library. Where, for a small $9 maintenance fee, you may borrow the device for 30 days and see firsthand how well it performs in your home or office, when your eyes are a little more tired, and with your particular lighting or unique task. Yes, for your convenience ATI is also a reseller for many of the products available for you to try, but we also provide you with referral information; as our goal is to provide educational information that will allow you to make an informed decision.

I can't wait to see you, because you don't have to struggle with poor work performance, or give up on your favorite hobby just because your vision is changing.

Eye Test

Question One: Is it true that diabetes can cause eye problems and may lead to blindness?

Yes, research shows that diabetes can cause eye problems and people with diabetes do have a higher risk of blindness than people without diabetes. November is American Diabetes Month so it's a great reminder that early detection and treatment of eye problems can save your sight.

Question Two: Is it true that pupil dilation from wearing sunglasses can cause problems for the eyes?

The answer to this is that there is very minimal dilation of the eyes when wearing sun protection and that the protection received from wearing sunglasses is greater than simply standing in the shade!

Question Three: Is it true that it's necessary to wear sunglasses in the winter?

Yes, while the sun's rays feel less intense during wintertime, they are still strong enough to worry about eye damage. New snow can reflect up to 80 percent of ultraviolet rays, according to the World Health Organization, while normal ground surfaces and bodies of water to reflect less than 10 percent.

So even though Summer is taking a break, our sunglasses should not be.
